INTRODUCTION:

OR

AN ABRIDGED GRAMMAR

OF

THE ITALIAN TONGUE,

COMPREHENDING, UPON A SIMPLE AND EASY PLAN, EVERY THING NECESSARY TO THE STUDENT.

IT IS DIVIDED INTO THREE PARTS:

1st contains a table of sounds with their figured pronunciation; accents, and abbreviations, &c., articles, adjectives, pronouns, and nouns.
2nd contains verbs regular, irregular, and monopersonal.
3rd contains prepositions, conjunctions, and adverbs.

PART I.

TABLE OF SOUNDS.

VOWELS.—The Italian tongue has six vowels, which, either preceding or following any consonant, are pronounced according to the following analysis of sounds;—

Long,	father.	fate,	keen,	yield,	home,	rule,
	a,	e,	i,	j,	o,	u,
Short,	far,	pen,	pin,		for,	full,
	à,	è,	ì,		ò,	ù.

CONSONANTS.—The consonants are the same as in English; but the letters k, w, x, are wanting. The letter k is supplied by c, w by u or v, and x by s, ss, or c; as, Serse, Xerxes; Alessàndro, Alexander; eccellènte, excellent.

The letter h has no sound of itself, but placed between c-e, c-i; g-e, g-i, hardens the sound of these soft syllables;

	and
	che,	chi,	ghe,	ghi,
are pronounced	ke, pt,	kid,	get,	gig.

SOUNDS OF SOME CONSONANTS.

c before e and i has the sound of *che*ss, chief,
cc before e and i sound like achieve,
g before e and i sounds like gem, gin, gg before e and i has the first g sounded liko adjust, gli has a liquid sound, and is pronounced like million, filial, but it keeps the English sound in the words Anglicàno, Anglia, negligere, and its derivatives, gn has a soft and liquid sound similar to that in the words, minion, onion, companion, gua, gue, gui, are pronounced guah, guay, guee, qua, que, qui, quo, like the words, quack, quake, queer, quote, sc before e and i sounds like sh in the English words shave, shipping; the sounds scia, scie, scio, sciu, forin but one syllable, and the i has a faint sound—Scia-gú-ra, Sciên-za, Sciol-to. But sch is always pronounced like sk; as, Schèrzo, schiavo. read Sker-tso, skia-vo.

z, single or double, in the beginning or middle of words is sounded like ts in benefits, and ds in Windsor. No certain rules can be given to distinguish these sounds. The strong sound is the most general.

t, in the middle or at the end of words, followed by any of these double vowels, ia, ie, ii, io, now generally spelled with z, is sounded ts; except when ti forms a distinct syllable, as in the persons of verbs, and in some nouns, which practice will teach.

Observe that every syllable formed of either consonants or vowels, is, in Italian as in English, pronounced distinctly; as, imménso, im-mén-so; ingrato, in-grá-to; maéstro, ma-és-tro; mio, mi-o, tuo, tu-o, &c. But when several vowels are united, as, mai, miei, tuoi, suoi, &c., each vowel must be pronounced, and yet they form only one syllable.

ACCENTS, APOSTROPHE AND ELISION, ABBREVIATIONS.

This part of the Introduction being of the greatest consequence to the easy and full understanding of the Italian writers, the student is earnestly recommended to pay the utmost attention to its short contents. A knowledge of them will remove the difficulties often found in the Italian poets.

ACCENTS.

The Italian language has two accents, grave and acute; the grave accent (') is placed upon the final vowel of words ending in à, è, ì, ò, ù.

1st. On words ending in à, as carità; è, rè; ì, dì; ù, virtù, &c.

2nd. On words of one syllable or more, as già; quà; sì; però; giù; sù, &c.

3rd. On the third person, sing. perfect tense of every verb, as amò, credè, sentì, &c.

4th. On the first and third persons, sing. future tense of every verb, as amerò, amerà; crederò, crederà; sentirò, sentirà, &c.

5th. On words of similar orthography, but of different meaning, as dà, gives; da, from; è, is; e, and; dì, day; di, of, &c.

Observation.—Final vowels grave accented suffer no elision, except in chè and its compounds, as ch'era, for chè era; perch'era, for perchè era.

Words grave accented, when joined to another beginning with a consonant, require the doubling of its first letter, and the suppression of the grave accent, as Egli parlommi, for Egli mi parlò, he spoke to me; dammi, for dà mi, gives me; piuttòsto, for più tosto, sooner.

The acute accent (') although often omitted in writing, yet requires due attention in the pronunciation of words, as by its long quantity it gives harmony to the language; in the persons of verbs where required, it should be duly observed, also on words of similar spelling, on which it should be invariably marked to prevent ambiguity, as ténere, tender; tenére, to hold; áncora, anchor; ancóra, again, &c. This accent is used only on í in the termination ía, ío, to make them two distinct syllables, as magía, desío, tuttavía.

All final letters, whether accented or unaccented, must be sounded in Italian.

APOSTROPHE AND ELISION.

Apostrophe is a small stroke affixed at the top of a word to show that one or more final vowels have been cut off, as l'anima, for la ánima; l'amóre, for lo amóre; de'libri, for dei libri; a'libri, for ai libri, &c.

In poetry this elision is sometimes omitted for the sake of poetical measure, as lo amóre; lo ingiûsto; lo eccesso, &c.

I, of the article il, is also cut off when preceded by a word ending with a vowel, as tra'l padre e'l figlio for tra il padre e il figlio, between the father and son.

Mi, ti, ci, &c. lose their final vowel before a word beginning with a vowel, and to which they are joined by the apostrophe; but, ci before a, or u, is neither cut off nor united for the sake of harmony.

Words in the singular having any of the liquid letters before the final vowel suppress that vowel without an apostrophe, as buon libro, good book.

All infinitives followed by any of these pronouns, mi, ti, ci, &c., lose their final e, in their absolute union together.

ELUCIDATION OF THE FINAL ABBREVIATIONS AND INCREASE OF WORDS EITHER IN USE OR FOUND IN AUTHORS.

CONTRACTIONS OF NOUNS.

ai, a' final stands for ale, or ali, easily known by the sense or preceding article, as mai, or ma', for mali, or male, &c.

e, i, o, final, are often suppressed, as cuor, miglior, for cuore, cuori, migliore, migliori; uman, for umáno, umáni, &c.

ei, final, for elli (plur. of ello), as quei, for quelli (plur. of quello), &c.

en, final, for ene, eni, as ben, for bene, beni, &c.

ésmo, for émimo, as medesmo-a, for medesimo-a, &c. oma is sometimes a plural increase, fem. of nouns ending in i, in the plur., as prátora, for prati (plur. of prato), &c.

CONTRACTIONS OF VERBS, OR CHANGE OF VOWELS.

a, changed into l, as favellí, for favella, 3 pers. sing. pres. subj. of favellare, &c. aro, ar, for aréno, as cantaro, cantar, for cantarono, 3 plur. perf. ind. of cantare, &c. e, changed into i, as avessi, for avesse, 3 pers. sing. perf. subj. of avére, &c.
eno, en, as facéno, facen, facevano, 3 pers. plur. imperf. ind. of fare, &c.
éo, for è, as perdéo, for perdè, 3 sing. perf. indic. of perdere, &c.
i, for ii, as sentí, for sentii, 4 pers. sing. perf. ind. of sentire, &c. ia, for iva, as venía for veniva, 4 or 3 pers. sing. imperf. ind. of venire, &c.
ieno, ien, for evano, ivano, as venieno, venien, for venivano, &c. io, ie, for i, as sentío, for sentì, udío, or udie, for udì, 3 pere. sing. perf. indic. of sentire, udire, &c.
iro, ir, for irono, as partiro, partir, for partirono, 3 pers. plur. perf. ind. of partire, &c.
ono, on, for ero, as diedono, for diedero, 3 pers. plur. perf. ind. of dare, &c.
orno, oro, or, as andorno, for andárono, 3 pers. plur. perf. ind. of andare, &c. o, a, i, e, for áto, áta, áti, áte, as cerco, for cercáto, &c., part. of cercare, &c.
ría, for rebbe, as saría, for sarebbe, 3 pers. sing. condit. of éssere, &c.
rían, avrían, for avrebbono, avrebbero, 3 pers. plur. condit. of avére, &c.
riéno, rien, as sariéno, sarien, for sarebbero, 3 pers. plur. condit. of éssere, &c.
sin, as avessin, for avessero, 3 pers. plur. perf. subj. of avére, &c.
sino, as vedessino, vedessin, for vedessero, 3 pers. plur. perf. subj. of vedére, &c.

ARTICLES.

There are three articles in the Italian tongue.

	m.	m.	f.
The definite,	il,	lo,	la,	&c.	the.
The partitive,	del,	dello,	della,	&c.	some, any.
The indefinite,	un,	uno,	una,	&c.	a, an.

DEFINITE ARTICLE.

The following prepositions placed before are used to modify either articles, nouns, pronouns, or proper names.

		de	or	di,	of.
		a	or	ad,	to,	at,	for.
		da	—	—	from,	by.
sing. m.	plur. m.		sing. m.	plur. m.	sing. f.	plur. f.
il,	i,		lo,	gli,	la,	le,	the.
del,	dei, or de',		dello,	degli,	della,	delle,	of the.
al,	ai, or a',		allo,	agli,	alla,	alle,	to the.
il,	i,		lo,	gli,	la,	le,	the.
dal,	dai, or da',		dallo,	dagli,	dalla,	dalle,	by the.

OBSERVATIONS.—Il, is placed before masculine nouns beginning with one consonant.
Lo, before masculine nouns beginning with s, and another consonant, or z; also before a masculine noun beginning with a vowel, cutting off the o of the article, which is supplied with an apostrophe between the article and noun.
La, before feminine nouns: before nouns beginning with a vowel, the a is cut off in the singular, and expressed by an apostrophe between the article and noun; in the plural it retains its vowel except coming before a word beginning with e, when it is suppressed.
In words beginning and ending in e, in the singular and plural, the e of the article cannot be cut off in the plural, to distinguish it from the singular, where it is suppressed, as in the singular of l'effigie, in the plural, le effigie.
Gli, the plural of lo, is placed before s, and another consonant, or masculine nouns beginning with a vowel.
Before words in the plural beginning with i, it loses its i, which is supplied with an apostrophe, and, joined to the noun, it is pronounced in one syllable, as gl' indizj, yn-dits-ii.
When the i of the article is not cut off before a vowel, it is also pronounced with the first syllable of the noun, as gli onori, *yo-no-ri.

PARTITIVE ARTICLE.

m.	m.	fem.
sing. del,	dello,	della, dell',	some, any.
di, or d',	di, or d',	di, or d',	of . . .
a del,	a dello, dell',	a della, dell',	to some, any.

* This union of the article with the noun must be carefully attended to.

	m.	m.	fem.
plur.	dei, or d',	degli, degl',	delle, dell',	some, any.
	di, or d',	di, or d',	di, or d',	of . . . .
	a dei, or de',	a degli, degl',	a delle, dell',	to some, any.

OBSERVATION.—The partitive article always denoting a part of a whole, is consequently taken from the genitive of the definite article, which implies a totality, as, the loaf, il pane; part of it, some of the loaf, or contracted, some bread, del pane, &c., following the agreement of gender, number, and initial letter of the noun.

Del, before a single consonant, sing.
Dello, before s, and another consonant, sing.
Dell', before a masculine noun beginning with a vowel.
Dei, or de', before a single consonant, plur.
Degli, before s, and another consonant, plur.
Degl', before a masc. noun plur. beginning with a vowel.
Della, before a consonant.
Dell', before a vowel, sing. and plur. except e.

INDEFINITE ARTICLE.

	m.	m.	fem.
sing.	un,	uno,	una, un',	a, an, or one.
	di un,	d' uno,	d' una, d' un',	of a, an, or one,
	ad un,	ad uno,	ad una, ad un',	to a, an, or one.
	m.		fem.
plur.	alcuni,		alcune,	some, any.
	d' alcuni,		d' alcune,	of some, of any.
	ad alcuni,		ad alcune,	to some, to any.

OBSERVATIONS.—Un is used before a noun masc. beginning with a consonant.
Uno, or un', before s, and another consonant, or a vowel.
Una, before a consonant.
Un', before a vowel, masculine or feminine.

The Italians have only two genders, both applicable to animate and inanimate objects, the masculine and feminine.

The terminations of nouns and adjectives follow the five vowels, a, e, i, o, u.

Nouns in o,	are generally	masc.	plural in i.
Nouns in a,	are	fem.	plural in e.
Nouns in e,		masc. and fem.	plural in i.
Nouns in i,		masc. and fem.	plural in i.
Nouns in ù,		fem.	plural in ù.
Nouns in à, grave accented,		fem.	plural in à.
Nouns in io, sounded in one syllable,		masc.	plural in j.
Nouns in io, sounded i-o, in two syllables,		masc.	plural in i.

OBSERVE.—Nouns in a derived from Greek, as Poëta—Eremita are masculine, and end in plural in i.

j.—This letter is always pronounced like double ii, either in the beginning, middle, or end of words.

Dissyllables ending in co and go, except porco and greco, make chi and ghi, in the plural.

Words of three syllables, except those ending in cco, and a few others, make ci and gi (pronounced), tshi, dgi.

Words ending in ca and ga, in the singular, mostly feminine, make che and ghe in the plural.

OBSERVATION.	sing.	plur.	sing.	plur.
	co, m. makes chi,		go, m. makes ghi,
	ca, f.	che,	ga, f.	ghe.

Every noun and adjective ending in o is masculine, and makes i in the plural; as, libro, libri, book, books; dotto, dotti, learned.

Every noun and adjective ending in a is feminine, and makes e in the plural; as, tàvola, tàvole; table, tables; dotta, dotte, learned.

Every noun and adjective ending in e, masculine or feminine, makes i in the plural; as, padre, padri, father, fathers; prudente, prudenti, prudent.

COMPOUND ARTICLES

Follow the same rule as their primitives in gender and number.

Nouns preceded by the article definite, or a possessive pronoun with one of the prepositions, in, con, sur, per, before them, changes il, lo, la, i, gli, le, into the following compound article;

	masc. s.	fem. s.	masc. pl.	fem. pl.
In the,	nel, nello,	nella,	nei, ne', negli,	nelle.
With the,	col, collo,	colla,	coi, co', cogli,	colle.
Upon the,	sul, sullo,	sulla,	sui, su', sugli,	sulle.

	masc. s.	fem. s.	masc. pl.	fem. pl.
For the,	pel, pello,	pella,	pei, pe', pergli,	pelle.
In my,	nel mio,	nella mia,	nei, or ne' miei,	nelle mie.
With my,	col mio,	colla mia,	coi. or co' miei,	colle mie.
Upon my,	sul mio,	sulla mia,	sui, or su' miei,	sulle mie.
For my,	pel mio,	pella mia,	pei, or pe' miei,	pelle mie.

These two Italian prepositions, In and Con, in and with; also the adverb Non, not, requires i before a word beginning with s and another consonant, as ;

Egli è in *i*studio, non posso disturbarlo, he is in study, I cannot disturb him.
Voi vi comportate con *i*stravaganza, you conduct yourself (or yourselves) with extravagance.
Ella prodiga il suo danaro con *i*spese inutili, she lavishes her money in foolish expenses.
Eileno questo non *i*staranno molto tempo, they will not stand this long.

Italian nouns and adjectives by a peculiar manner may have their primitive signification increased or decreased with the following terminations joined to the radical letter of the noun by striking off the final vowel.

These terminations, applicable to masculine and feminine nouns and adjectives, adopt the gender and number of their termination.

FOR THE INCREASING QUALITY.

m.	f.
-one.		something large, or big.	Libro, book, librône, a large book.
-accio,	-a,	large and ugly, &c.	Libro, book, librâccio, a large ugly book.
-ame,		number of, quantity of.	Gente, people, gentâme, number of people.

FOR THE DECREASING QUALITY.

m.	f.
-ino,	-a,	pretty little dear.	Fanciullîno, pretty dear little boy.
-etto,	-a,	poor dear little.	Uccelletto, poor dear little bird.
-ello,	-a,	dear little;	Campannêlla, dear little cottage.

These three diminutives have nearly the same meaning, and express the affections of the mind in an affectionate manner, blended with pity.

From many more scarcely reducible to rule, the two following are often used to express some thing small and mean, as ;

ADJECTIVES.

COMPARISON.

Adjectives, besides qualifying nouns with which they agree in number and gender, increase or decrease their comparative quality by più, more, and meno, less, immediately placed before the adjective. To render the comparison more emphatic, via, or vie, assai, molto, is joined to più, or meno, expressing much more, much less. As,

Egli è più stimato,	he is more esteemed.
Egli è via più stimato,	he is much more esteemed.
Egli è vie più stimato,	. . . . .
Egli è assai più stimato,	. . . . .
Egli è molto più stimato,	. . . . .
Egli è meno ricco,	he is less rich.
Egli è via meno ricco,	he is much less rich.
Egli è vie meno ricco,	. . . . .
Egli è assai meno ricco,	. . . . .
Egli è molto meno ricco,	. . . . .

Than, after a comparison, is expressed by

1st. Di, before proper names, nouns, pronouns, time, and numerals.
2nd. Del, dello, &c. before the definite article, or possessive pronoun, preceding a noun.
3rd. Che, before a noun indefinite, an adjective, a verb, participle, and an adverb. As,
1st. Egli è più ricco di Creso, he is richer than Cræsus.
Egli è via più ricco di me, he is richer than I.
Niente è più importante di tempo, nothing is more important than time.
Gli diedi più di venti scellini, I gave him more than twenty shillings,
2nd. Niente è più grato della lode d'un { nothing is more pleasing than the approbation of a good man.
buon' nomo,
La mia casa è meno grande della vostra, my house is less large than yours.
La virtù è più amabile della beltà, virtue is more amiable than beauty.
3rd. Questo mi farà più onore che profitto, this will do me more honour than profit.
Questo colore è più turchino che nero, this colour is more blue than black.
Egli beve più che mangia, he drinks more than he eats.
Ella è più lodata che amata, she is more praised than loved.
Voi fate più saviamente che profittevolmente, you act more wisely than profitably.

A comparison made between two nouns, pronouns, or proper names, may be rendered also by che for than, as;

La bontà é migliore che la beltà, goodness is better than beauty.
Egli è meglior amico che marito, he is a better friend than husband.
Ella più chel'altra lo merita, she more than the other deserves it.
Shakspiro mi piace più che Voltairo, Shakspeare pleases me more than Voltaire.
Mi piscerebbe più Edinburgh che Glasgow, I should like Edinburgh better than Glasgow.

A comparison made with one of these adverbs of equality, so, so much, as, as much as, is rendered either by quanto alone before the compared object, or così before the adjective, and come before the noun; or by tanto in the first part of the sentence, and quanto in the second part, as;

Lo scolare non é dotto quanto il maestro, the scholar is not so learned as the master.
Mia fortuna non è così grande come la vostra, my fortune is not so large as yours.
Mio fratello non fù così lodato come la mia sorella, my brother was not so much praised as my sister.
Mio padre è così ostinato come egli, my father is as obstinate as he.
Sono tanto riguardati da Dio i poveri quanto sono i ricchi, the poor are as much regarded of God as the rich.
Iddio riguarda tanto i poveri quanto i richi, God looks down upon the poor as much as upon the rich.

These four adjectives are excepted in part from the rule of comparison in their formation.

Positive.	Comparative.		Positive.	Comparative.
Buono,	migliore,	these two are invariable,	good,	better.
Cattivo,	peggiore,		bad,	worse,
Grande,	maggiore, or più grande,		great,	greater.
Piccolo,	minore, or più piccolo,		little,	less.

OBSERVATION.—Migliore and peggiore, as adjectives, are used with nouns.

Meglio and peggio, as adverbs, with verbs, participles, &c., as;
Portatemi un meglior libro, bring me a better book.
Voi avete una peggiore sedia, you have a worse seat.
Eglino fecero meglio, they have done better.
Ella si ha comportata peggio, she has conducted herself worse.

SUPERLATIVE COMPARISON

Is formed by taking away the final vowel of the adjective, and adding -issimo, m. -issima, f. -issimi, mp. -issime, fp. as, bello, fair, bellissimo, &c., fairest.

But should the definite or a possessive article stand before most, as, the most, my most, it must be expressed by the article, il, la, &c. preceding più, meno, or mio, &c.; as,

Egli è il più destro di tutti, he is the most clever of all.
Ella è la più bella di tutte, she is the most beautiful of all.
Egli è il meno ricco di tutte, he is the least rich of all.
Ella è la meno amabile di tutte, she is the the least amiable of all.
Egli è il mio più intimio amico, he is my most intimate friend.
Elleno sono le-mie più grandi ricchezze, they are my greatest riches.

Superlative comparison, in Italian, is also very elegantly formed by the repetition of the positive adjective; as,

Fa bel bel tempo, it is very fine weather.
Maria è la bella delle belle, or Maria è bella bella, } Maria is very handsome.
Vi sono tedioso tedioso, I am very tiresome to you.
Il tempo è freddo freddo, the weather is very cold.

These four excepted, superlatives may also be expressed according to rule.

Positive.	Superlative.		Positive.	Superlative.
Buono,	ottimo,	or, il più buono,	good,	best.
Cattivo,	pessimo,	or, il più cattivo,	bad.	worst.
Grande,	massimo,	or, il più grande,	great.	greatest.
Piccolo,	minimo,	or, il più piccolo,	little,	least.
			small,	smallest.

All these follow the gender and number of their nouns.

These six adjectives, except when preceding s, and another consonant, are contracted thus:

	Uno,	bello,	santo,	quello,	buono,	grande,
Before a consonant,	Un,	bel,	san,	quel,	buon,	gran,
Before a vowel,	Un',	bell',	sant',	quell',	buon',	grand'.

PRONOUNS.

The persons of a verb, suffering no other change than that of preceding or following the verb, or of having their final vowel cut off before another, to prevent confusion, are simply called persons. These are for the

m. f.	m. f.	m.
sing. Io,	tu,	egli, ei, e', esso,	ella, essa, lei,	si,
I,	thou,	he, or it,	she, or it,	one, anybody, people, &c.
plur. Noi,	voi,	églino, essi,	élleno, esse,	si,
We,	you,	they,	they,	men, we, &c.

Of these persons the third singular and plural must always be expressed before the affirmative inflection, to prevent the ambiguity of gender; the others may be omitted, if no emphasis be required on the person.

In interrogative sentences they must all be placed invariably after the verb, without exception.

There are six sorts of pronouns:

1st. Disjunctive pronouns,	me,	me.
2nd. Conjunctive pronouns,	mi,	me.
3rd. Possessive pronouns,	il mio, &c.	my, mine.
4th. Relative, simple, and compound, &c.	che, chi, il quale,	who, that which.
5th. Demonstrative pronouns,	questo, quello, &c.	this, that, &c.
6th. Indefinite pronouns,	ogni, &c.	all, each, every.

1st.—DISJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS

Must always be modified by one of the following or any of the prepositions without the influence of a verb, except in apposition to another noun.

The prepositions are,

Di,	of.
A,	to, for.
Da,	from, by.

Con before me, te, se, is placed after, with n cut off, as;

Meco,	with me.
Teco,	with thee.
Seco,	with himself, &c.

With the exception of me, te, se, joined to the preposition con, all other prepositions must always precede the following

DISJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS.

Sing.		Plur.
m. f. Me,	me.	m. f. noi,	us.
m. f. Te,	thee.	m. f. voi,	you.
m. Lui,	him.	m. loro,	them.
f. Lei,	her.	f. loro,	them.
m. f. Se,	one's self.	m. f. se,	themselves, &c.

Egli parla di me, he speaks of me
A me non sembra, it does not appear to me.
Per me non é straordinario, it is not extraordinary for me.
Preso da me commiato, having taken leave of me.
Parlo a voi ed agli altri, I speak to you and to the others.

To the above pronouns is joined stesso, declined according to the gender and number of the person or thing; as, per se stesso, per se stessa, per se stessi, per se stesse, for himself, herself, one's self, themselves, as:

masc. Lo farò da me stesso, I will do it by myself.
masc. Lo farémo da noi stessi, we shall do it by ourselves.
fem. Lo farò da me stessa, I will do it by myself.
fem. Lo farémo da noi stesse, we shall do it by ourselves.

2nd.—CONJUNCTIVE PRONOUNS, SIMPLE AND COMPOUND,

Are always governed by a verb; they must be placed absolutely after the verb, in the infinitive, imperative, the present and past participles. They may precede or follow the persons in all the other tenses; but should they be placed after a person, grave accented on the last syllable, they require to double their initial letter, as, instead of io lo darò, io darollo, I will give it.

ACCUSATIVE SIMPLE PRONOUNS.

Sing.		Plur.
m. f. Me,	me.	ci,	us.
m. f. Te,	thee.	vi,	you.
m. Lo,	him, it.	li,	them.
f. La,	her, it.	le,	them.

m. f. ti,	to thee.	vi,	to you.
m. gli,	to him.	loro,	to them.
f. le,	to her.	loro,	to them.
m. f. si,	to one's self.	si,	to themselves.

COMPOUND PRONOUNS.

When two of these pronouns are joined together, the i of the dative pronoun is changed into e; as

m. Melo,	him, or it to me.	celo,	him, or it to us.
f. Mela,	her, or it to me.	cela,	her, it to us.
m. Meli,	them to me.	celi,	them to us.
f. Mele,	them to me.	cele,	them to us.
m. Telo,	him, it to thee.	velo,	him, it to you.
f. Tela,	her, it to thee.	vela,	her, it to you.
m. Teli,	them to thee.	veli,	them to you.
f. Tele,	them to thee.	vele,	them to you.
m. Glielo,	him, or it to him, her.	selo,	him it to one's self themselves.
f. Glieli,	her, it to him, her.	sela,	her, it to one's self, themselves.
m. Glieli,	them to him her.	seli,	them to themselves.
f. Gliele,	them to him, her.	sele,	them to themselves.

m. Lo-loro, him it to them. f. La-loro, her it to them. m. Li-loro, them to them. f. Le-loro, them to them. } These four pronouns require lo, &c. before the verb, and loro after, except the imperative, infinitive, the present and past participles, when they must be placed after in two distinct syllables; as, datelo loro, give it to them; non lo darò loro, I shall not give it to them.

Ne, some, some of it, of them, any, follows the same rule as lo-loro, in respect to its position before and after the verb.

Mene, some, of it, &c. to me.	cene, some of it, &c. to us.
Tene, some, &c. to thee.	vene, some of it, &c. to you.
Gliene, some, &c. to him or her.	sene, some of it, &c. to himself, themselves.

Ne loro, some, some of it, &c. to them; as,

Melo darete voi? will you give it to me?
Egli ne la darà oggi, he will give her, or, it to me to-day.
Egli darammela oggi, he will give her, or, it to me to-day.
Date meli, give me them.
Non potreste voi darmele? could not you give them to me?
Ella disse dandomelo, she said in giving it to me.
Dato meli egli uscì, having given them to me he went away.
Ella diede mene, / Ella diemmene, / E'n mene diede, } she gave me some of it.

EXAMPLES on ne and lo, with loro.

Egli ne darà loro / Egli daranne loro, } he will give some of it to them.
Ne darà egli loro? / Daranne loro egli? } will he give some to them?
Datene loro, give some to them.
Per darne loro, to give them some.
Dandone loro, in giving them some.
Datone loro, after having given them some.
Egli lo darà loro, / Egli darallo loro, } he will give it to them.
Lo darà egli loro, / Darallo loro egli? } will he give it to them?
Datelo loro, give it to them.
Per darlo loro, to give it to them.
Dandolo loro, in giving it to them.
Datolo loro, having given it to them.

The emphasis in these compound words falls on the verb, and not on the pronouns: as, Datteglielo, Parlòglielene.

OBSERVE.—ne, and loro, never vary their termination. Lo, la, li, le, are declinable according to gender and number.

3rd.—POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

	m. s.	f. s.	m. p.	f. p.
1st.	Mio,	mia,	miei,	mie.
2nd.	Tuo,	tua,	tuoi,	tue.
3rd.	Suo,	sua,	suoi,	sue.
4th.	Nostro,	nostra,	nostri,	nostre.
5th.	Vostro,	vostra,	vostri,	vostre.
6th.	Loro,	loro,	loro,	loro.

These preceding or following a noun (for they may be so used) are simply qualifying articles, agreeing with that noun in gender and number; but used by themselves they are relative possessive pronouns, agreeing with the noun to which they refer.

Preceding nouns of quality or relation, the definite article may be omitted in the singular number, but not in the plural: also after the verb essere, to be. In every other position they require the definite article before them, as:

Avete voi il mio libro e la mia chiave? or Il libro mio e la chave mia, } have you my book and my key?
Portatemi i miei guanti e le mie fibbie, bring my gloves and my buckles.
È questro vostro? è mio, is this your's? it is mine.
È questa tabacchiera vostra? è mia, is this your snuff-box? it is mine.
Sono questi fiori i vostri? sono i miei, are these flowers yours? they are mine.
Sono queste case le vostre? sono le mie, are these your houses? they are.
Ciò parlò di vostra maestà, he spoke of your majesty.
Vostra maestà ha commendato lo, or, l'ha commendato, your majesty has approved of it.
L'ho portato a mio padre, ed a mia madre, I have carried it to my father and my mother.
Ditelo ai miei fratelli ed alle mie sorelle, tell it to my brothers and sisters.
Questo fu comprato da mio padre, da mia madre, dai miei fratelli, dalle mie sorelle, } this was bought of my father, my mother, my brothers, my sisters.

RELATIVE PRONOUNS, SIMPLE AND COMPOUND.

SIMPLE PRONOUNS.

Che, chi, quale, who, which, that. Che, either as a relative pronoun, or interrogative article, remains indeclinable. It is of both genders and numbers, and applicable to all objects.

Preceding a noun it is an interrogative article, modified with any preposition, but particularly di, a, da, as:

Che uomo viene a parlarvi? what man comes to speak to you?
Che strada bisogna egli pigliare? what street must one take?
Di che donna parlate voi? of what lady do you speak?
A che giuoco giuocate voi? at what game do you play?
Che città amate voi meglio? what town do you like best?
Da che paese venite voi? from what country do you come?
Che libri sono ottimi? what books are the best?
Da che genti avete voi udito questo? from what persons have you heard this?

Quale, is also used as an interrogative article before the noun, and may be employed instead of che, in the above associations, except that quale is declined like nouns ending in e, making i in the plural; but che is more elegant, and more used by good writers and speakers; as:

Qual uomo viene a parlarvi? what man comes to speak to you?
Di quale donna parlate voi? of what lady do you speak?
Quali libri sono ottimi? what books are the best?
Da quali genti parlate voi? of what persons do you speak?

Che, as a relative pronoun, comes after the noun it represents, always preceding the verb of which it is the nominative case; as,

Il maestro, che insegna, the master, who teaches.
Le strade, che sono larghe, the streets, which are wide.

Chi, who, whosoever, some one, any one, is an interrogative pronoun relating only to rational objects not mentioned. It is of both genders and numbers, and is modified by di, a, da; as,

Chi di voi ha detto questo? which of you has said this?
Di chi avete voi parlato? of whom have you spoken?
A chi l'avete voi dato? to whom have you given it?
Da chi è stato battuto? by whom was he beaten?

Cui, employed for all cases except the nominative, is more properly the genitive case of a relative pronoun referring to all objects, but generally to rational—by its peculiar position an Italian sentence becomes extremely elegant—to effect which, it should always be placed between the definite article and the noun; as,

Il cui bel viso voi ammirate, or, Il di cui bel viso, &c. for, Il bel viso di cui, &c. } whose beautiful face you admire.
Al cui padre jo fui introdotto, or, Al di cui padre, &c. for, Al padre di cui, &c. } to whose father I was introduced, to the father of whom.
Dal cui signore ho ricevuto una lettera, or, Dal di cui signore, &c., for, Dal signore di cui, &c. } by the gentleman from whom I have received a letter.
La cui bellezze volete vedére, or, Le di cui bellezze, &c., for, Le bellezze di cui, } the beauties of which you wish to see.

I cui amici v'ho parlato, or, I di cui amici, &c., for, Gli amici di cui, } the friends of whom I spoke to you.

The compound relative pronoun, il quale, that which, agrees in gender and number with its noun. It is employed like the relative, che, for all objects, but is not so elegant; as:

Il libro, il quale io leggo, the book which I read.
La moglie, la quale amo, the wife whom I love.
Gli uomini, i quali ho pagati, the men whom I have paid.
Le case, le quali ho comprate, the houses which I have bought.

Che? what? as a pronoun interrogative, always precedes the verb; as:

Che è fatto? what is done?
Di che si parla egli? of what do they speak?
A che impiegano eglino il loro tempo? at what do they employ their time?
Che faremo dopo pranzo? what shall we do after dinner?

But che, before a verb followed by an adjective, is rendered by how in English; as,

Che voi siete buono! how good you are!
Che eglino sono nojosi! how tiresome they are!

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS AND ARTICLES.

Questo, questa, questi, queste, this, these, for near objects;
Quello, quella, quelli, quelle, that, those, for distant objects;

Are demonstrative articles agreeing in gender and number with their following noun. They cannot be preceded by the definite article, il, lo, &c.; as,

Quest' uomo mi storde, this man stuns me.
Questa donna è molto affabile, this lady is very affable.
Il merito di questo libro non è conosciuto, the merit of this book is not known.
Il piacere di questa vita è molto breve, the pleasure of this life is very short.
A questo momento ella finì, at this moment she finished.
Questi edifizj sono bellissimi, these buildings are very fine.
Queste regole non sono molto difficili, these rules are not very difficult.
Voglio parlarvi di questi affari, I wish to speak to you of these affairs.
Di queste storie, una è verissima, of these stories, one is very true.
A questi ordini egli tremò, he trembled at these orders.
A questi cose voi dite niente, you say nothing to these things.

Quello, &c., follows the same rule, except that quel is used before a masculine noun beginning with a single consonant, and quello before s and another consonant, or before a vowel, with final r cut off, supplied by apostrophe placed between; in every respect it follows the rule of lo, the indefinite article, both in gender and number; as,

Spedite quell' uomo con quel libro, send that man with that book.
Non è quella città larghissima? is not that town very large?
Quei cavalli sono molto fatigati, these horses are much fatigued.
Quegli uomini furono molto impazienti, those men were very impatient.
Quelle donne sono le più belle, those ladies are the most beautiful.
Parlo di quegli onori che ha ricevuti, I speak of those honours he has received.

Questo and quello, this, that, used without a noun after them, are pronouns substantive, applicable only to inanimate objects, and declined with di, a, da; as,

Datemi questo, give me this.
Portate quello alla casa mia, carry that to my house.

Questi, quelli, quei, quegli, this one, or this man, that one, or that man, are substantive pronouns of the singular number, rarely used for the plural. They are applicable only to rational objects.—Quelli follows the rule of change belonging to lo, before consonants or vowels; as,

Questi dice, quelli, or quei fa, this man says, that one acts.
Questi, giuoca, quegli studia, this one plays, that man studies.

s. m.	s. f.	pl. m. f.
Costui	costei	costoro, this man, this woman; these men, women;
Colui	colei	coloro, that man, that woman; those men, &c.

Are substantive pronouns employed only for rational objects, and generally placed at the end of a sentence; as,

Questo è per colui, non datelo a costui, this is for that man, do not give it to this man.
Invitate costei, omettete colei, invite this woman, leave out that, &c.
Portatelo a costoro, carry it to these men, women.
L'ho ricevuto da coloro, I have received it from those men, those women.

These two adverbs, qui or quà, here, and lì or là, there, joined to questo or quello, express the same meaning as costui, &c., and are more elegant, particularly in the plural; as,

Questo è per questo quì, this is for this man.
Non datelo a quello là, do not give it to that man.
Parlate voi di questa quì? do you speak of that woman?
No! parlo di quella là, no! I speak of that woman.

Portate le lettere mie a questi qui, carry my letters to these men.
Avete voi il danaro di quelli là? have you the money of those men?
Domandatelo a queste qui, ask it of these women.
Rimettetelo a queste là, remit it to those women.

Cotesto, or codesto, cotesta, or codesta, cotesti, or codesti, coteste, or codeste, that, those, is an adjective used to represent an object near the person addressed, and answers to quel or quello; as,

Datemi cotesto, or quel vino, give me that wine.
Pigliate cotesto vino, take this wine.

To these demonstrative pronouns may be added,

Ciò, this, that.

This pronoun always refers to an inanimate object, and is modified with the prepositions di, a, da, &c.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS,

More properly, pronomial adjectives, are applicable to all objects. Some of them are used with a noun; others without one, it being understood; some are declinable, and others indeclinable.

Of those which are declinable, the following, compounded of uno, adopt the general rule of gender and number:—

m. s.	f. s.	m. p.	f. p.
Ognuno,	ognuna.	ognuni,	ognune, every one, everybody.
Ciascheduno,	ciascheduna,	ciascheduni,	ciaschedune, every one, everybody.
Ciascuno,	ciascuna,	ciascuni,	ciascune, every one, everybody.
Alcuno,	alcuna,	alcuni,	alcune, some one, somebody.
Qualcuno,	qualcuna,	qualcuni,	qualcune, some one, somebody.
Qualcheduno,	qualcheduna,	qualcheduni,	qualchedune, some one, somebody.
Nessuno,	nessuna,	nessuni,	nessune, no one, nobody.
Niuno,	niuna,	niuni,	niune, no one, nobody.
Veruno,	veruna,	veruni,	verune, no one, nobody.

The above pronouns, often unattended by a noun, always agree in gender and number with the noun to which they refer. They require the preposition di between them when they precede disjunctive pronouns; when they are preceded by pronouns, they observe only the agreement of gender and number.

m. s.	f. s.	m. p.	f. p.
Tutto,	tutta,	tutti,	tutte, all.
Altro,	altra,	altri,	altre, other, others.
Certo,	certa,	certi,	certe, a certain, &c.
Tale,	tale, tal, tal',	tali,	tali, tai, ta', such another.

The above four are, properly, adjectives employed to denote peculiar properties of individuals or things.

Tutto implies a totality, and must be used before nouns preceded by the definite article, placed between tutto and the noun.

Altro, &c., is only used for the nominative singular and plural; preceded by any preposition, it is changed into altrui for both genders and numbers.

Altro, in the singular number, without a noun, becomes a substantive, employed for inanimate objects, or implying something else; as,

Parliamo d'altro, let us talk of something else.

Altri, is also used instead of a noun for the singular number when it refers to rational objects; as,

Altri mangia, altri dorme, the one is eating, the other sleeping.

Tale and certo, are used, as in English, to denote certain properties of individuals or things.

The following pronominal adjectives are indeclinable, and of both genders:—

Ogni, all, each, every, { is used before nouns of the singular number, and without the article, or when all can be changed into each, every.

Qualche, some.

Chiunque, whoever, whosoever, } is used without a noun.
Chichessia, whoever, whosoever, }

Qualunque, whatever, whatsoever, }
Qualsivoglia, whatever it may be, } adjective or pronoun.
Qualsisia, whatever, whosoever, }

As,

Ogni uomo pagò il suo scotto, each man paid his reckoning.
Ogni anno produce molti cambj, every year produces many changes.
Egli passa ogni notte alle carte, he spends every night at cards.
Avete voi qualche moneta? have you some money?
Egli è stato per qualche tempo in Francia, he has been for some time in France.
Glichiede qualche sussidio, he asked him some assistance.
Chiunque dice ciò, s' inganna, whoever says so is mistaken.
Chichessia l' ha fatto, sarà punito, whoever has done it shall be punished.

Qualunque moneta avete, datemela, whatever money you have, give it me.
Dite qualsivoglia, non importa, say what you please, it matters not.
Qualsisia la scusa che allega, egli non sarà creduto, } whatever excuse he may allege, he shall not be believed.

PART II.

VERBS.

FORMATION OF THE TENSES.

There being few students unacquainted with the names of moods and tenses, it is needless to describe their nature or order. Yet it should be recollected that the present, perfect, and future of the indicative are of a positive nature, the conditional with the tenses of other moods of a contingent futurity.

The present is formed from the infinitive by taking off, áre, ére, íre—(vide Synopsis).

The imperative from the 2nd pers. sing., and from the 1st and 2nd persons plural of the indicative (the first conjugation excepted, which changes the 2nd person singular into a), and from the 3rd persons sing. and plur. of the subjunctive.

The future and conditional from the infinitive; the first by changing e final into o, the latter adding i to e final—(vide Synopsis).

Ambo, both, is used for both genders, and is always followed by the plural articles, i, gli, le; as, ambo i libri, both books; ambo gli amici, both friends; ambo le mani, both hands.

Ambidúe is used for masculine nouns; as, ambidúe i fratélli, both brothers;—ambedúe for feminine; as, ambedúe le sorélle, both sisters.

By the present disposition of the moods and tenses, entirely original—not for the sake of innovation, but of greater simplicity—the author trusts that he has rendered their attainment more easy and speedy: it being of no consequence in what manner they are arranged (being already out of their natural order), provided their powers be well understood, and their application readily made.

The bringing into an immediate view moods and tenses so widely removed from each other, and exhibiting and imprinting at once their various terminations, will be a strong inducement for sanctioning its adoption.

DUOPERSONAL VERB

c'è, ci-sono, &c.

From the above verb éssere, and these two adverbs, ci, here, and vi, there, is formed the duopersonal verb simple and compound, here is, here are; there is, there are, &c., by taking the third persons singular and plural of every tense according to the number of its nominative, observing in compound tenses, the agreement of the past participle with its preceding noun, pronoun or person, as :—

V'è una donna nella stráda, there is a lady in the street.
Ci sóno molti fióri nel giardíno, here are many flowers in the garden.
Vi sóno le mógli e loro, there are their wives.
C'é státo un' uómo nella cása, here has been a man in the house.
V'é stata una zitélla che vi domandò, there has been a girl who asked for you.
Ci sono státi molti uómini, here have been many men.
Vi sono státi molte donne, there have been many ladies.
Vi sono mólti caválli ? are there many horses ?
V'éra la vostra soréll a ? was your sister there ?

Should here or there, ci, or vi, come before any other past participle than that of the passive auxiliary, the active auxiliary must be used, as :

Ci ho passáto mólti felici giórni, I have passed here many happy days.
Vi ho passáto mólte infelici óre, I have passed there many unhappy hours.

The ready use of this duopersonal verb depending solely upon a full knowledge of the verb éssere, that verb of course must be fully acquired.

DUOPERSONAL VERB

cen'è, ven'è, &c.

This verb, c'è, ci sóno, &c., has only two inflections, the affirmative and negative, the interrogative and negative interrogative being only distinguished by the rising of the voice on the final syllable, which is depressed on the affirmative and negative. To this verb is also joined the pronoun, ne, some, of it, of them, &c., united with ci, vi, changing i into e, as cene vene. Ci denotes proximity, vi distance; speaking of time, they are suppressed.

Cen'è nella càsa, here is some of it in the house.
Ven'è nella città, there is some in the town.
Cene sóno nella cámera, here are some in the room.
Vene sóno in Inghilterra, there are some in England.
Cen'è státo, státa, here has been some.
Ven'è státo, státa, here has been some.
Cene sono stati, státe, here have been some.
Vene sono státi, státe, there have been some.

The adverbs, chere, or there, coming after these pronouns, me, thee, him, &c., require not to be expressed in Italian; as,

Mi vedrete, you shall see me there.
Vi scriverò, I shall write to you there.

Some, any, of it, of them, after numbers, may be expressed only by ne, without ce, &c.; as,

Quanti mési ne sono? how many months is it since?

The following conjugation of the present and compound tenses in their four inflections will be sufficient to elucidate the whole.

2nd ends in	ére, e short or long.	úto, úta, úti, úte.
3rd ends in	íre, í long.	íto, íta, íti, íte.

Their present participles end in—

The past participles of verbs are declined like adjectives, and agree in gender and number with their noun or pronoun; but there are positions where they remain undeclined. Preceded by the noun, &c., they agree together; coming after, they are indeclinable, as;

Gli uóminí che ho vedúti, the men I have seen.
Le donne che hó vedúte, the ladies I have seen.
Védete la léttera che ho ricevúta, you see the letter I have received.
Ho vedúto gli uómini, I have seen the men.
Ho vedúto le donne, I have seen the ladies.
Ho ricevúto la léttera che vedéte, I have received the letter you see.

The relative pronoun suppressed in English cannot be omitted in Italian.

The past participle preceded by any person of the verb, avére, remains undeclined before the infinitive of a verb, as;

I generáli avévano credúto, } the generals had thought pérdere la battáglia } to lose the battle.
Mia sorélla ha credúto, } my sister has thought that stare per morire } she was dying.
La cittá ha fátto costruíre un } the city has had a bridge pónte, sópra la riviéra } built over the river.

MODE OF USING THE SYNOPSIS.

The order of this synopsis, by its simplicity and natural formation, claims the particular attention of the student, who, at one glance, will observe the immediate similitude and affinity existing between the three most important moods, the indicative, imperative, and subjunctive; also of the other tenses classed in a similar manner. Instead of travelling through the immense labyrinth of tenses as heretofore, he has at his command the whole verb, with its four inflections, by taking off the final syllable, are, ere, ire, from any verb, and in its place affixing the terminations according to the conjugation. By this easy mode every difficulty is removed, and his progress much forwarded. In irregular verbs there are slight deviations in the formation of some particular tenses, but it should be remembered that the four following tenses are general to all:—these are

IMPERFECT,	vo, or va,	vi,	va,	vámo,	váte,	vano,
FUTURE,	rò,	rái,	rà,	remo,	réte,	ránno.
CONDITIONAL,	rei,	résti,	rébbe,	rémmo,	réste,	rébbero.
PERF. SUBJ.	ssi,	ssi,	sse,	ssimo.	ste,	ssero.

The above terminations are joined to the vowel preceding re of the infinitive, the first conjugation excepted, which changes a into e in the future and conditional tenses.

It was thought more consonant with true grammar to use vo, instead of va, in the first person of the imperfect, although va be generally used in common speech, yet it is more allowable to poets for the sake of rhyme, than to good speakers.

The irregularities of verbs in ere are noticed in their alphabetical order and proper place.

Past participles of the first conjugation are sometimes contracted by cutting off at of the final syllable, as carico for caricáto, fermo for fermáto, &c.; in every respect all participles are used like adjectives, and for them.

The first conjugation ends in dre.

PASSIVE VERBS,

Being formed with essere in all its moods and tenses, and the past participles of verbs, the following examples will be sufficient to show how they are conjugated.

REFLECTIVE VERBS.

Every active verb of any conjugation, either regular or irregular, necessarily producing its action upon an object, requires after it the accusative or dative case of a noun; but when that action is reflected upon its own agent, the pronoun thus acted upon must be placed either before or after the verb, according to the following conjugation.

REFLECTIVE VERBS.

Every verb thus reflected, either naturally or according to this rule, invariably forms its compound tenses with éssere, to be; observing the general agreement of gender and number between the past participle and preceding pronoun or person; should the verb begin with a vowel, that or the pronoun is cut off and supplied with an apostrophe.

Monopersonal Verbs, or Verbs of One Person.

The most essential and idiomatical verbs, c'e, v'e, &c., having been conjugated at full length next to their primitive, where their constant and early use rendered them both necessary and more easy of reference, the following will include the others, arranged according to their conjugation.

Monopersonal verbs are either absolnte or personal.

Absolnte monopersonal verbs denote an action which cannot be prevented. They are expressed by the third person singular of every tense and mood according to the inflection.

Personal monopersonal verbs refer to the actions and manners of men. They are either preceded or followed by the conjunctive pronouns, mi, ti, si, &c., according to the inflection.

Observe that, in the formation of the various persons, the final vowel or syliable marked in italics is to be taken off, and replaced by the termination required.
